The London Times, in an editorial on the position of affairs at Vicksburg, as advised by the China, argues that the first accounts had not been followed eby the successful results expected, and with every day Grant's position was becoming more critical. The article says, "the fortunes of the Federal arms at the last date were balancing between a temporary check and total failure. All the details have an impression that unusual energy had secured very slight results."

Later advices from Vicksburg were anxiously awaked in Eugland. The more especially as it was reported through private channels and extensively credited that Vicksburg had been relieved, and that Grant's army had been surrounded by the Confederates.

GEN. FOREY'S REPORT ON THE CAPTURE OF PUEBLA.

Gen. Forey's report, dated May IS, has reached Paris. Gen. Forey states that, on his refusing to permit the retreat of the Mexican troops from Puebla, Gen. Ortega decided on deselving his army. He also caused all arms to be broken, guns to be spiked, and the magazines to be blown up. Gen. Ortega then sent a flag of truce to Gen. Forey, announcing that the garrison had terminated its detuces, and placed itself at Gen. Forey's discretien. "Then," continues Gen. Forey's discretien, the greater part without uniforms, arms or equipments—the whole of the two later havy been broken and thrown into the atreets—constituted themselves prisoners. From 1,000 to 1,200 officers caused me to be informed that they were assembled at the palace waiting my orders. All the material of war remains in our possession. In the House of Commons on the same evening, Mr. Layard stated that an international conference had been held in Paris for the purpose of examining into the project of a telegraphic line from Europe to North America, via Brazil and the West Indies, but her Majesty's Government had not considered it necessary to take part in that conference.

Mr. Layard, in answer to Mr. Siddall, stated that some time ago a murderons attack was made upon four British subjects riding upon the high road in Japan, in which one gentleman, Mr. Richardson, was killed, and two others wounded. Her Majesty's Government had demanded from the Japanese Government had demanded from the Japanese Government an ample apology for the outrage, the payment of £100,000 as a penalty, and that the family of the victim should be compensated.

On the motion of Lord Palmerston, the proposition to purchase the Great Exhibition building for national purposes was carried by a vote of 267 to 135.
